Est. 2012

Since January 2012, the Act Out Theatre Company has been providing arts outreach and education opportunities in the heavily gang influenced community of North Long Beach and beyond. Our mission is to provide a TUITION-FREE opportunity for at-risk and traditionally underserved children and adults to discover their creative potential with arts programming and educational training that enrich their lives and stimulate the entire community! Act Out exists in a diverse, urban neighborhood. It is diverse racially, economically, and religiously. Our zip code has nearly 100,000 people with a third of them born outside of the United States. 22% live below the poverty line. Seven different gangs operate within a 10-minute circumference of our facility. Andy Street, an area of section 8, low income housing, which is 500 feet from our building is notorious as one of the most violent streets in Long Beach. Due to the economic disparity, the only bit of arts programming that many of the middle-school and high-school students in our area are exposed to is the small amount they get in school. Other programs offering the same level of arts education that we offer in Long Beach generally cost between $300-$500 per student and frankly, that is out of reach for most of the families we serve. Therefore, all our performance opportunities are tuition-free and our other arts education workshops are either no or low-cost alternatives to meeting the demand for arts education. By providing a safe place for youth to discover who they are, we see an environment where children and adults are building team skills, learning how to cooperate and work with each other toward common goals. Direct evidence from parents and teachers indicate they are improving in confidence and grades, building social skills and learning social responsibility. We're cultivating leadership skills that will help them shape the future of this community...this all just happens to take place in the context of theater and the arts. With nearly 250 participants and close to 3500 theater attendees anticipated in 2022, we are working hard to revitalize our North Long Beach neighborhoods with activities that spur creativity, innovation, and empowerment. Thank you for supporting the aspiring youth that would not have these opportunities without your help.
